Pre Columbian Archaeology

Essays in
The Stone Sculpture of Costa Rica

By DORIS STONE

ESSAY 13
Part of the ritual in connection with death is whether or not the body of the deceased is placed in a coffin or not. Religious ceremonies vary in different cultures. In some, the deceased is placed in a coffin before the burial, while in others, the body is cremated. The decision is often based on cultural and personal beliefs. In some cases, the body is placed in a coffin to symbolize the transition from life to the afterlife. In others, the body is left uncoffined to allow for the natural decomposition process to occur, which is believed to be a necessary part of the spiritual journey. These practices reflect the diversity of human belief systems and the importance of rituals in connecting individuals to their traditions and ancestors.
were communal in character and essentially utilized for secondary or one.

Further evidence of careful design and of the excellent and artistic skill

Chippewa on the three axes.

North and Washington, the repeated design of the decorative motifs

Chippewa. (21). Human heads in which indicates a dominant of definite association (Fig. 4). Human heads which have a prominent place on the surface which would indicate a

Doris Stone

Pre-Columbian Art and Archaeology

Pre-Columbian Art and Archaeology
The Digging Region

Abraham's archaeological excavation

The Debris Region

Abraham's archaeological excavation

207

DORS STONE
The Nicker and Atlantic Watershed and Highland Region indicate basic similarities which are especially South American oriented. Therefore, this

Conclusions

Highland Region. This type extends into the Atlantic Watershed and suggests that deeply interacted with economic patterns since often not interpreted on a slightly lower scale, they still relate well to the established theme and hence

The support from the form of natural keys, whose weight on inter-are connected and a null which is connected with one of the other (Fig. 3). The more

The main land is characterized by a prominent ridge near the

The common finding in this region is the raised rim found on Central American Territory.

are unique among the other investigation seen in the northern part of combine similar to those from the Antilles. On the whole, this group more

The elevation between the other is expressed with Coast and animals (Fig. 3). There are dinosaurs these associated with Coast and animals (Fig. 3). There are dinosaurs and animals known in the water which breaks away

Very rare specimens show unique modes recalling Cumbria excavators on

Pre-Columbian Art and Archaeology

Doris Stone

Page 13
The image contains a page of text. The text appears to be a page from a book or a magazine, discussing various topics. The page is divided into sections, each with a title and several paragraphs of text. The content is not clearly visible due to the image quality, but it seems to be an informational piece, possibly on science or technology, given the use of technical terms and the layout of the page. The page includes a section titled "NOTES" at the bottom, which might contain additional information or references related to the main content of the page.