Prerequisite(s): Archaeology 210 and 60 units (10 full course equivalents)

Course Objectives:

The main objective of this course is to introduce students to some of the major theoretical trends in North American Archaeology over the past century. Although the roots of European archaeology are often associated with history and/or the natural sciences, those of American archaeology tend to be tied to ethnology. As a result, archaeology in the Americas is generally taught in departments of anthropology. To a great extent, these different historical trajectories reflect the nature of the data. That is, European archaeologists study the lifestyles of their ancestors while American scholars attempt to reconstruct the lifestyles of Native populations whose cultures differ radically from their own. Despite these differences, there is, in fact, a substantial degree of congruence between developments in European and American archaeology, particularly during the early years. Thus, beginning with early ideas about the antiquity of human beings and their place in the natural world, we will trace the development of contemporary methods and theory in archaeology. Further, these developments often reflect changes in the social contexts and personal experiences of individual scholars. Thus, we will examine how events in society and theoretical developments in other disciplines relate to the changes in theoretical paradigms adopted by archaeologists.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this course, students will be expected to:

- 1) Outline the basic historical sequence of theoretical frameworks used in archaeology
- 2) Describe the changes in research methods associated with the shifts in theoretical frameworks
- 3) Understand how theory influences the nature of evidence
- 4) Apply theoretical principles in the interpretation of archaeological data

Proposed evaluation methods:

The evaluation methods used in this course will be negotiated and agreed to by the students on the first day of class.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

Academic integrity is essential to the pursuit of learning and scholarship in a university, and to ensuring that a degree from the University of Calgary is a strong signal of each student's individual academic achievements. As a result, the University treats cases of cheating and plagiarism very seriously. Non-academic integrity also constitutes an important component of this program.

For detailed information on what constitutes academic and non-academic misconduct, please refer to the following link: <http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/k-2-1.html>

All suspected cases of academic and non-academic misconduct will be investigated following procedures outlined in the University Calendar. If you have questions or concerns about what constitutes appropriate academic behavior or appropriate research and citation methods, you are expected to seek out additional information on academic integrity from your instructor or from other institutional resources.

Where there is a criminal act involved in plagiarism, cheating or other academic misconduct, e.g., theft (taking another student's paper from their possession, or from the possession of a faculty member without permission), breaking and entering (forcibly entering an office to gain access to papers, grades or records), forgery, personation and conspiracy (impersonating another student by agreement and writing their paper) and other such offences under the Criminal Code of Canada, the University may take legal advice on the appropriate response and, where appropriate, refer the matter to the police, in addition to or in substitution for any action taken under these regulations by the University

TEACHING EVALUATIONS / USRIS (Universal Student Ratings of Instruction)

At the University of Calgary, feedback provided by students through the Universal Student Ratings of Instruction (USRI) survey provides valuable information to help with evaluating instruction, enhancing learning and teaching, and selecting courses. Your responses make a difference, please participate! Website: <http://www.ucalgary.ca/usri/>

Writing Across the Curriculum

Writing skills are not exclusive to English courses and, in fact, should cross all disciplines. The University supports the belief that throughout their University careers, students should be taught how to write well so that when they graduate their writing abilities will be far above the minimal standards required at entrance. Consistent with this belief, students are expected to do a substantial amount of writing in their University courses and, where appropriate, members of faculty can and should use writing and the grading thereof as a factor in the evaluation of student work. The services provided by the Writing Support, part of the Student Success Centre, can be utilized by all undergraduate and graduate students who feel they require further assistance
