The archaeological examination of gender relations in prehistory is a relatively new and dynamic field of investigation. Since Conkey and Spector's ground-breaking article in 1984 first highlighted the invisibility of gender in archaeology there has been an explosion of interest in the topic, with theoretical significance that has dramatically affected many aspects of archaeology. Since gender bias has been a crucial element in modern society as well as in the direction of academic inquiry, the course will also turn a critical eye on the interrelationship between the past and the present. This seminar will cover the theoretical foundations of an engendered archaeology, and will touch upon case studies from different time periods and geographical areas. Emphasis will be placed on gender relations in the Americas.

PEDAGOGICAL EXPECTATIONS:
Students will be presented with and expected to learn about archaeological case studies in which gender has been a significant component of the interpretation. This information will embody multiple lines of evidence, including archaeology, art history, ethnohistory, and ethnography. As a seminar, students will be required to present their own critical evaluations of the articles and then lead class discussion of the topic.

GRADING CRITERIA:
Students will be evaluated based on a take-home midterm exam (20 pts), take-home final exam (20 pts), research paper (40 pts), presentation of a conference-length summary of the research paper (10 pts), and class participation (10 pts). This class is designed as a seminar, and is dependent on class participation; attendance and preparation are very important! Individual grades will be based on total points received:

- 98-100 = A+
- 93-97 = A
- 90-92 = A-
- 87-89 = B+
- 83-86 = B
- 80-82 = B-
- 77-79 = C+
- 73-76 = C
- 70-72 = C-
- 67-69 = D+
- 60-66 = D
- Less than 60 points = F

RESEARCH PAPER:
A 10-12 page research paper, worth 40 points, is required for the class. Paper topics must be cleared with the professor in advance. A research paper should involve on average one source per page of text, so at least 10 different published references. Please use scholarly journals such as American Antiquity; Web sources may be cautiously included in addition to the published references.

IMPORTANT: Plagiarism, defined as copying more than 5 words in succession or using information without adequate citation (i.e., reference and page number) of the original source, is a violation of academic integrity. Research papers that plagiarize will receive a 0 score, and the student will be turned over to the Dean of Social Sciences for possible expulsion (see page 49 of the U of Calgary Calendar).
